A QUAKER MEETING.

It was our privilege upon a recent Sunday, to attend public worship in a Quaker "Cathedral," in the very pleasant village of Amesbury, Mass. We went in company with Whittier, the renowned Quaker poet, whose literary tame extends scross the Atlantic, and waose purity of life and rare fidelity to his principles, command universal respect -The friends attached to the Friends' Meeting House in Boston are far different from those connected with a Quaker church in a rural village where the worshippers follow agricultural pursuits and the birds at the season of the year do the singing for the meetings on "first day" We never saw so neat a place of public assembly as the house at Amesbury-the very floor is cleaner than the walls of many of our city churches. The little folks present were models of propriety, and the whole atmosphere of the place was favorable to reflection and meditation. The service consisted of the most profound silence, a short but excellent address, and a brief, compreheneive prayer. We never have witnessed a more devout or thoughtid assembly.

The small congregation of worshippers were not inaptly called "Friends." The mild and amiable looks of those present gave evidence of calm and tranquil souls and obaracters in which were blended fratercal love, universal charity and rectitude. We were in a church not only without priests but without sacraments-no pealing organs, no trained and cultivated singers, no reading of the Sacred Word, no hymn books, no written discourse-there was not even a pulpit, that great bulwark of Protestantism, in the sanctuary! But we felt that we were in a truly Christian assembly. Those about us, according to the testimony of the "world's people," are good neighbors, good men and women, good Christians .-They lead lives of unostentatious and simple goodness. We would recommend a visit to a Quaker meeting to those of our city friends who are in the vicinity of one during their summer vacations. The silence of the assembly will be a novel experience to persons accustomed to have the outward senses constantly appealed to. One of the earliest, as well as one of the most protracted, silent meetings named in history, is recorded in the book of Job, where Eliphaz, Bildad and Z>phar remained with Job "seven days and nights, and none spake a word unto him, for they saw that his grief was great." A story is related of a person, who told a Quaker that the silence of a meeting of the Society of Friends was enough to kill the devil; to which the Quaker replied, that it was the very thing the silent assembly were trying to do. An English Archbishop has stated that religion seems to have made the deepest impression on the Quakers. Whittier has beautifully said

The Quaker of the olden time! How calm and firm, and true, Unspotted by its wrong and crime, He walked the dark earth through; The lust of power, the love of gain, The thousand lures of sin Around him, had no power to stain

The love of purity within. As we sat within the plain walls of the modest "meeting-house," and saw faces upon which "the dove sat visibly brooding," we thought of Charles Lamb's charming essay upon such an assemblage, and the following words of the gentle Elia haunted our medita-

"Wouldet thou know what true peace and quiet mean; wouldst thou find a refuge from the noises and clamors of the multitude; ty; wouldst thou possess the depth of thine own spirit in stillness, without being shut out from the consolatory faces of thy species; wouldst thou be alone and yet accompanied; solitary, yet not desolate; singular, yet not without some one to keep thee in countenance; g into a Quaker meeting. To pace alone in the cloisters or side aisles of some cathedral,

---- "or under hanging mountains, Or by the fall of tountains-"

is but a vulgar luxury, compared with that which those erj y who come together for the purpose of more complete, abstracted solitude. This is the loneliness "to be felt." The Abbey Church of Westminster bath -nothing so solemn, so spirit-secthing, as the naked walls and benches of a Quaker meeting. Here are no tombs, no inscriptions-

"Sands, ignoble things, Dropped from the ruined sides of Kings-"

but here is something which throws Antiquity berealf into the foreground-Silenceeldest of king-language of old Night-primitive discourser -- to which the insolent decays of mouldering grandeur have but arrived by a violent and, as we may say unnatur al progression.

Frequently the meeting is broken up without a word having been spoken. But the mind has been fed. You go away with a sermon not made with hands. You have been in the milder caveras of Trophonius, or as in some den, where that fiercest and savagest of all wild creatures, the tongue, that unruly member, bas etrangely lain tied up and cap tive. You have bathed with stillness. Oh when the spirit is sore fretted, even tired to sickness of the janglings and nonsense, noises of the world, what a balm and solace it is to go and seat yourself, for a quiet half hour among gentle Quakers. Their garb and stillness conjoined, present an uniformity, tranquil and herd like-as in a pasture-"forty feeding I ke one."-- Boston Tran.

COMPANY, ALEXANDRIA, VA.-CAPITAL OVER $250,000. AND CONSTANTLY INCREASING.
The charter of this Company offers more favorable advantages to the farmer and others, than any other company chartered in the State, by insuring with or without a premium note. If the applicant prefer, he can pay the full amount of the premium in cash, or by effecting a cash insurance for two years, the insured saves oneeighth of the amount he would otherwise have to pay: or by becoming a member, and giving a small premium note, the insured saves nearly one half of the amount charged by Stock Companies, when insuring from year to year. This is the advantage resulting from the combination of THE CASH AND MUTUAL PRINCIPLE.

This company commenced issuing Policies against loss or damage by fire, on the 16th of March, 1854, since which time over five thousand seven hundred persons have insured and become members of the Company, and over thirty thousand dollars have been paid for losses,-Having trebled our business during the past year, we feel grateful for the liberal patronage bestowed upon the Company thus far, and for its flattering prospects of future usefulness. The Directors hope and believe that by prudence, caution and a rigid system of economy, they will establish for this Company a reputation for cheapness and safety, not surpassed by any Company in the U. States.

All differences in settlement of losses, may be determined by three disinterested arbitrators of the County where such loss happened to be mutually chosen by the insured and the Company. DIRECTORS: Christopher Neale,
